

The Next Generation of Gender Outlaws

What do you do if you meet one? What do you do if you are one?

illustrations from the cover of Gender Outlaws: The Next Generation.

Dear Heart,

Thank you for your interest in my work. And thank you for your interest in bringing me out to your campus, conference, or town to co-create with you a safer space for you and other teens, freaks, and other outlaws.

For the past fifteen years, I've been touring with pieces that have focused primarily on deconstructing sex and gender binaries—and more recently, I've added suggestions on how to stay alive once you've done that. I'm adding layers of social justice, coalition-building, and laying open the very real heart connection that can be found in putting queer theory into practice.

With the publication of Gender Outlaws: The Next Generation, (co-edited with S. Bear Bergman), up-to-date information on the ever-changing state of gender is yours to study, experience, and have fun with... right now! I understand that this isn't necessarily good news for everyone. It's hard to be the new kid in the clubhouse. What's more, the presence of new identities within a group puts a strain on the group's values and definitions. Oh, what to do!?

By combining what I've learned through writing Hello, Cruel World: 101 Alternatives to Suicide for Teens, Freaks, and other Outlaws with what I've learned from all the amazing contributors to Gender Outlaws: The Next Generation, I've been able to come up with a perspective that fosters inclusion over exclusivity, trust over suspicion, and compassion over bullying. That's my work these days. That's what I'd like to help you with on your campus, at your conference, in your town, at your business or place of worship. I hope to see you soon.

With love & respect, Kate

The Outlaws Are Coming!
The Outlaws Are Coming!

A NEW WORKSHOP
with Kate Bornstein

Join Kate in exploring many of the new challenges & opportunities raised by the presence of more and more visible sex & gender outlaws in your part of the world.

- Learn to experience your own sex and gender fluidity, as well as others around you.
- Pinpoint and break through the non-consensual cultural traps established by intersecting systems of oppression.
- Untangle gender pronouns for everyone, once and for all.
- Learn how to predict the future of sex and gender. No, really.
- Fun quizzes & exercises galore!

...workshop description continued on back page

THIS YEAR'S LECTURES, PERFORMANCES, & EDUTAINMENT

Kate Bornstein: On Men, Women, and the Rest of Us

This is my autobiographical signature piece—my most personal stories, my favorite comic and dramatic monologues, and even a chapter from my upcoming memoir, A Queer and Pleasant Danger (BeaconPress, spring 2012).

On Men, Women, and the Rest of Us is an entertaining introduction to the notion of sex and gender beyond the binary—as well as a deeply moving affirmation of spirit for sex-and-gender outlaws. If you don't mind the f-word every now and then, the show is even child-friendly.

Campuses and conferences alike have chosen this piece for both celebrating and increasing the awareness of trans identities.

Keynote/Plenary/Graduation Addresses

I've had the privilege, honor, and great joy to keynote local, national, and international symposia, conferences, and orientation sessions. If you'd like to bring me in to speak at your event, the first thing we'll do is talk in depth about the theme of your event. My job will be to supply the keynote that will energize your attendees and send them out the door fired up and ready to apply in the real world what they've learned at your event.

Pride Week, Pride Month, Gay Days, Gaypril, Trans Pride... You Name It, We Can Celebrate the Pride of it.

I've changed my message about pride, and I think you deserve an explanation.

With the inclusion of several generations of gender outlaws—and with several absolutely delightful permutations on sexual preference—the shape of LTBTQetc. has become less defined, more amorphous. It's scary, belonging to a group of people that's always shifting its definition of membership. But the fact that we do open our arms to include a wider range of sex positivity and gender fluidity—that's something we can take pride in: the pattern of inclusivity our community has followed over the last four or five decades.

Pride today is more than the pride we can take in claiming an identity, and then proclaiming our identity (coming out) to ourselves, our loved ones—and those with whom we work side by side. That was pride in our identities in the world. Yay us, look at who we are. More and more LGBTQetc are increasingly vocal about a pride we share in the celebration of our unique desires. And we can take pride in the progress we've made in sharing power within our own ranks, with a greater awareness of racism, classism, ageism, religious bigotry, homophobia, transphobia, misogyny, lookism, ableism, national jingoism, and heteronormativity.

So we take a day, week, or month in which we celebrate the pride we take in our accomplishments—and we deepen our resolve to accomplish as much or more in the year to come. That's what I want to talk about when I address your Pride celebration.

Come Out, Come Out, Whatever You Are

National Coming Out Day is both an exhilarating and scary holiday for LGBTQetc people.

Coming out as any gender or sexuality that's different from what people think you are is a frightening thing to do. You can lose your family, your home, your friends, and your job. If you come out with the intention of following the nature of your evolving desire—you can lose a lover. Been there, lost all of that. I've got lots to say about coming out. Most of it is encouraging and uplifting, and the rest of it is comic relief. I can deliver the kind of Coming Out talk that's just right for where you live.

KICK-ASS FIERCE & POPULAR SPOKEN WORD PIECES

Sex, Bullies, and You: How america's bully culture is messing with your sex life

This is my call-to-arms piece, my call for unity with everyone whose sex life or gender presentation has been wrecked by some bully. Sex, Bullies, and You is a 60 minute performance version that formed the basis of the bully section in my book, Hello, Cruel World. There are sex-and-gender bullies of all ages, and many hold positions of real power in the culture, or on your campus. Bullies make life seem less worth living.

Bully culture began way back in school, when kids were teased, harassed, beaten, raped, or murdered for nothing more than their sexuality—or for the way they expressed themselves as masculine or feminine. It was simply love that made those kids stand out. You'd think it would be love that could make us stand together.

Sex, Bullies, and You is the piece I wrote to inspire that kind of love. If there's any sort of homophobic nonsense going on where you live, this is the piece I want to deliver for you, your allies, and all the people who just need to wake up and feel the love. Then, we can get on with the business of cultural revolution.

Dangerous Dreams & Damned Desires: The personal politics of sex positivism & gender anarchy

Sex, love, gender, and desire—even when they're consensual and respectful—are rarely granted any seat at the table of public discourse. For example, could you teach or enroll in a course in masturbation on your campus? At your community center? How about a simple little—hands on themselves only—workshop for teens on the subject of making their own bodies feel great? Could you do that where you live? Why not, and what can you do about it?

For thousands of years, radical notions of consensual, respectful desires have been demonized, silenced, and invisibilized. It's time we talk with each other about sex. Dangerous Dreams and Damned Desires is edutainment, drawn from my book, Hello, Cruel World: 101 Alternatives to Suicide for Teens, Freaks, and Other Outlaws.

Desire is the stuff of laughter, tears, and paradox. I've been able to successfully tailor this performance piece for many different audiences. The outer edges of our desires are some of the most life-affirming dreams in our lives. With this performance, I'll gently lead each member of the audience as close to the edge as they're willing to go.

When Religion Is A Problem: A Tao of Mitzvah, Martyrdom, Sabbath, & Boddhisatva

I wrote this talk to help teens, freaks, and other outlaws how we learn and enjoy the nature of our desire.

- Tao is a word meaning roughly the center path. Mitzvah is the Jewish word for a good deed done, unasked-for and with no strings attached. Optimally, we move through life performing mitzvahs.
- Martyrdom is self-injury or self-destruction for a greater cause. Sabbath is a period of rest in which we honor the goodness of ourselves. We rest and renew in Sabbath.
- A Boddhisatva is an enlightened teacher who doesn't stop teaching until the cessation of suffering of all sentient beings.

Many of us have spent our lives listening to people—those who speak on behalf of many of the world's largest religions—call us freak and bad and evil for so long, that we default into thinking of ourselves as bad. We come to believe that we deserve the hurt we feel, and that the best good deed we can perform is an act of martyrdom.

It takes a great deal of practice to truly honor our own goodness through the exploration of our outlaw desires, whatever those desires happen to be at any given moment. That's how we learn to trust ourselves to determine our own identities: we move through life doing good deeds, we rest in the sabbath of celebrating our outlaw desires.

THIS YEAR'S WORKSHOPS: SEX, GENDER, AND SURVIVAL

Hello, Cruel World: An Outlaw's Mini-Guide to Survival

Sometimes, whatever it is that gives you the most joy, pleasure or relief also gets you into the deepest trouble—especially when you try to explain it to other people. Like when you love someone you're not supposed to love. Or when the way you express yourself makes other people queasy. As harmless as you feel you're being, people may still think you're bad, wrong or immoral. There are far too many people who are in that position in life, and it goes far beyond simply sex and gender.

This workshop is 90-120 minutes of me talking with you about doing anything it takes to make your life more worth living. Anything. With the single rule: Don't be mean. I love doing this workshop, and the discussion that follows it. The workshop is available with or without the truly fun audio/visual bells and whistles.

Acting Beyond Red or Blue: coalition-building from the margins

America is faced with climbing out of the hole we dug ourselves into when we allowed the previous Administration to bully us into being either with them or against them. Well, we're all in this hole together now. It's not a matter of Democrat or Republican any more. It's not black or white, or rich or poor, or smart or stupid. It's not even a matter of "Two Americas," as appealingly simple as that sounds. American culture is deeply divided—and subdivided, and subdivided, and subdivided again. It's the dividing that's got to stop.

Acting Beyond Red or Blue is a workshop on how to create change that dismantles each of the interlocking systems of oppression that are choking US culture: racism, sexism, classism, and homophobia—to mention but a few. This workshop puts postmodern theories of deconstruction into grassroots political practice.

Gender is what I know best. I'm currently touring with two gender workshops. Each of these workshops helps make gender theory more accessible, providing a deeper experience of gender theory in both body and spirit.

How to Have a Gender-Free Orgasm*

Could it really be possible to have an orgasm with your clothes on and without touching yourself or being touched by anyone else? Can you really reach ecstasy simply by breathing? Can gender possibly be irrelevant when it comes to orgasm?

In this workshop we'll explore the unlimited possibilities of orgasm, particularly the vast range of orgasms that lie beyond those achieved by genital stimulation. Although this is a participatory workshop, there will be no nudity and you will not be asked to work with a partner. You could even invite the CEO or the Dean of Students.

* This workshop, and the description of it here, were written and developed by Barbara Carrellas, my partner and author of Urban Tantra: Sacred Sex for the 21st Century. Barbara trained me on how to facilitate this workshop on my own, but it's even more fun if you bring the two of us.

Your Gender: Now You See It, Now You Don't

One of the basic tenets of postmodern gender theory is that gender is mutable. Theoretically, we're all capable of being/performing any gender we enjoy being, or need to be. The trick to developing this talent is to consciously shift our gender in two steps: first you'll take your current gender off, then you'll put another gender on.

That's easier said than done, but this workshop will give attendees tools to play with their genders, in any way they choose. This is a 90 minute to two-hour workshop for both small and large groups of people. There is also a version of this workshop for acting students.

...and by the way—while i'm in your town or on your campus, speaking or performing, I wanna do a whole lot more than simply that.

I enjoy participating in classroom and informal discussions with LGBTQetc students or conference attendees. I'm also glad to attend receptions, participate in panels and town hall style discussions, do book signings, and schedule any number of workshops.

I'm always happy to meet or speak with local media to publicize your event. And of course, while I'm there, we can share time in any number of more social get-togethers.

XOXOXO,

Kate

To contact me about an engagement please visit my touring schedule to see if I'm available for the dates you're considering. Then send me an email with the best times to reach you by phone. The best way to reach me for personal matters is by Twitter.

Kate with students from Arizona State University, downtown campus

continued from the front page...

The Outlaws Are Coming!
The Outlaws Are Coming!

A NEW WORKSHOP
with Kate Bornstein

The Outlaws Are Coming, The Outlaws Are Coming is a series of lectures, exercises, quizzes, and challenges exploring the entirely new presence of the new generation of sex and gender outlaws in your world—beyond even the new distinctions of transgender and cisgender.

We will explore the language and cultural do's and don'ts of the new sex and gender revolution. We will explore the values of sex positivity and gender anarchy. We will work out ways to actualize those values for ourselves, and welcome them in others.

This is an intensive two to five day workshop that may be tailored to the needs of students, teachers, school and business administrators, personnel care-providers.

Attendance is limited so that all workshop attendees get the hands-on attention to detail that will help them achieve the personal goals they've set for the workshop.

I am thrilled to be adding this new workshop to my touring lineup, and I look forward to speaking with you about bringing it to your campus or town in a format and timeframe that will fit your schedule and meet both your needs and resources.